Pont-y-Pair, Bettws-y-Coed ("The Bridge of the Cauldron"), spans the river Llugwy on the way to Miner's Bridge and the Trefriw Road. It was built in the 15th century by a mason named Howel, and is a stone structure with four arches, the foundations of which rest on rocks. The river Llugwy, beautiful at almost any part of its course, is here particularly picturesque, and this spot is a favourite with many visitors.
